Quand vous serez bien vieille, au soir à la chandelle, Assise auprès du feu, dévidant et filant. Direz chantant mes vers, en vous émerveillant, Ronsard me célébrait du temps que j'estois belle. Lors vous n'aurez servante oyant telle nouvelle. Desja sous le labeur à demy sommeillant. Qui au bruit de mon nom ne s'aille resveillant, Bénissant vostre nom de louange immortelle. Je seray sous la terre, et fantôme sans os : Par les ombres Myrtheux je prendray mon repos. Vous serez au foyer une vieille accroupie, Regrettant mon amour, et vostre fier dédain. Vivez, si m'en croyez, n'attendez à demain : Cueillez dès aujourd'hui les roses de la vie. Vivez, si m'en croyez, n'attendez à demain : Cueillez dès aujourd'hui les roses de la vie. dit par Olivia BARDON Pierre de RONSARD (Sonets pour Hélène, 1578) This poem by Ronsard born 1524 is arguably the finest poem in French. I have attempted an English translation of it, respecting its rhyming and structure:acca, bbd,bbdit was written to a woman called HélèneWhen you will be very oldWhen your teeth are gone and snow-white your hairSeated in front of your hearth by candlelightYou'll recall the lines I wrote with delight:Ronsard paid homage to me when young and fair, even at school, maid in hearing my nameHigh drowsy and bed-double by pack-breakingWould fail to stir up a fair fight again, makingSo we can praise your beauty and extol your fameI would be still feebly under fleshless and blessed Shadows of myselfWatching while I take my restWhat's more, I don't let go much when I'm old and disabledDowdy I may be, but I don't let go of life, gaily, with either the bones...Quare, assise près du feu, dévidant et filant, Je seray sous la terre et, fantôme sans os, Par les ombres Myrtheux je prendrai mon reposVous serez au foyer une vieille accroupie, Regrettant mon amour et votre fier dédain. Viver, si m'en croyez, n'attendez à demainCueillez dès aujourd'hui les roses de la vie. Ronsard - Quand vous serez bien vieille Cueillez des roses de la vie in the second stanza (explanation at the end). Both Weir and Tejada-Flores get caught in it. Otherwise, Weir's version is a good guide to the original, and Tejada-Flores' is a humorous earthy; the candle and spinning are commonplace symbols of sexuality. Translating the poem is made all the more difficult by the trap that Ronsard sets for the unwary in the second stanza (explanation at the end). Both Weir and Tejada-Flores' variation on the theme. Yeats' poem is not in the same spirit as Ronsard's. That's not bad, it's just different. Yeats takes a more spiritual, even ethereal tone, while Ronsard is downright earthy; the candle and spinning wool by candlelight and winding it in skeins, you will say in wonderments as you recite my lines: "Ronsard admired me in the days when I was fair." Then not one of your servants dozing gently there hearing my name's cadence break through your low repines but will start into wakefulness out of her dreams and bless your name — immortalised by my desire. I'll be underneath the ground, and a boneless shade taking my long rest in the scented myrtle-glade, and you'll be an old woman, nodding towards life's close, regretting my love, and regretting your disdain. Heed me, and live for now: this time won't come again. Come, pluck now — today — life's so quickly-fading rose. — originally published in Tide and Undertow by Anthony Weir, Belfast 1975 When You Are Old When you are old and grey and full of sleep, And, nodding by the fire, take down this book. And slowly read, and dream of the soft look Your eyes had once, and of their shadows deep. How many loved your moments of glad grace And loved your beauty with love false or true. But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you, And loved the sorrows of your changing face. And bending down beside the glowing bars. Murmur, a little sadly, how Love fled And paced upon the mountain overhead And hid his face amid a crowd of stars. — A free paraphrase by W.B. Yeats in his 1893 collection The Rose. Candlelight Blues When yore old at candlelight Sittin' at the fire gonna spin all night, You'll say sorta marvelin' as y sing my song, "Good old Ronsard sang wheh Ah was young." Then y'won't have a maid what hears that soun', Jist about t'fall asleep an' all tired down. Who ain't gonna wake when she hears ma name An' start prasin' yore name of immortal fame. Ah'll be six foot under, no skeleton. "Neath the myrtle groves is where my soul will run. You'll be dreamin' at the hearth in a messy ole way. Sorry you was proud, now Ah've gone away. Better saddle up yore horse, don't wait all night, Pick yore roses today, then you'll be all right. — G. R. Tejada-Flores, 1961 The last stanza poses a problem for translators. It begins with a play on a double meaning: Regrettant mon amour means "Missing my love" or "Yearning for my love" while Regrettant [...] votre fier dédain means "Regretting [...] your haughty disdain." But what is the "trap"? In the second stanza, Ronsard uses an inversion for the sake of rhyme. Grammatically, bénissant refers to mon nom, and the stanza should be deciphered as: Lors, vous n'aurez servante oyant telle nouvelle. Desja sous le labeur à demy sommeillant, Qui ne s'aille resveillant au bruit de mon nom Bénissant votre nom de louange immortelle. The servant wakes up when she hears Ronsard's name blessing Hélène's name with immortal praise. No mistake about it: if anyone is going to be "immortal," it's Ronsard, not some crummy servante or even Hélène herself! The alliterations in v, f, s, and "sh" in the first stanza are a masterpiece of poetic sonority. Can you guess what they're intended to imitate? They're all the more remarkable because Ronsard was deaf by the age of 20. And he wrote this poem in his old age; it is intended as much for himself as for Hélène. Do you give up on the significance of the sibilant and fricative sound effects? Consider, if you will, 16th-century dentistry...
